This year's superstars are transforming HR through innovation and agility.

By The Editors

We are living in an age of immense technological disruption. Digital transformation is a top concern in boardrooms across the world, with companies adopting new technologies to reinvent themselves, deliver more value to their customers, and remain relevant in today's high-paced business climate. But to succeed, organisations need to transform at a more fundamental cultural level.

HR professionals across the globe are stepping up to meet the challenge. This year's superstars have a proven track record of challenging the status quo, adopting experimental methods, and redefining the new normal for HR. But whilst technology is a major part of this puzzle, the leaders featured in these pages have never lost sight of their top priority: their people.

From leveraging AI to increase diversity across the organisation to improving the accessibility of learning and development tools, this roundup of leaders are staunch advocates for employees at all levels, spearheading the adoption of technology to improve the employee experience. With the help of smart technologies and a new wealth of data, these leaders create targeted employee engagement strategies, leverage workforce planning insights to enable more fluid and organic career paths, and break down silos to encourage a consistent workplace culture and experience. And that's only the beginning.

Our roundup recognises three categories of leadership because each has a significant impact on the successful management of human capital: Providers, Practitioners, and Consultants/Advisors/Analysts/Academics/Investors/Thought Leaders. Superstars were nominated externally and by the HRO Today Global editorial staff.

James Eastwood
Engagement Executive
Capgemini

James Eastwood has been transforming teams and organisations in pursuit of peak performance for over 20 years. At Capgemini, Eastwood is an HR executive helping large client organisations such as Syngenta to move from traditional HR models to next-generation HR thinking and digital employee operations (DEO) on a global scale. "Transformation is about a journey, not a destination—so being recognized again as a HRO Today superstar is a great honor," he says. "This shines a light on the advancing HR achievements of the special team and client partners that we work with."

Sherif Hanna
Regional Chief People Officer
Integrated Diagnostics Holdings

With more than 20 years of progressive responsibility and expertise in strategic HR management, Sherif Hanna has successfully developed, managed, and implemented corporate plans for resourcing, recruitment, selection, and corporate training and development. He strives to build a value-added HR function by aligning employer branding, talent attraction, retention, organizational management, succession plans, and diversity and inclusion to business strategy to support company values and culture.

Terri Lewis
Senior Vice President and Global Head of HR
Pontoon

Terri Lewis is senior vice president and global head of HR for Pontoon, a division of The Adecco Group. She is responsible for driving the acceleration of Pontoon through leadership, differentiated talent models, attracting and developing the best talent, and building a culture of engagement, agility, and innovation. She oversees HR service delivery, diversity and inclusion, HR policies and programs, talent acquisition, and talent management. Lewis is a strong advocate for the HR professional as a business partner with a true understanding of the organisation and how it works, with the ability to develop and implement a people strategy to drive and enhance business results.

Galina Vaisband
HR Director
Home Credit Bank

Galina Vaisband is an aviation engineer by education and HR professional by her mission. After 15 years as sales and service director, she changed professions and become HR director. At Home Credit Bank, she is running all aspects of HR strategy, corporate culture, and talent development programs. She opened a kindergarten for employees' children right in the office. By the number of successful and innovative projects, HC Bank now is a benchmark in HR for other companies.
